

Development Dialog focuses on your development as an associate and is intended to encourage reflection, discovery, motivation, and growth as well as to give new impulses.

Use this self-reflection to prepare for the dialog.

Come prepared and bring your ideas and perspectives to the dialog.

Purpose of the dialog

To get the most out of your dialog, think about the following in advance: What is the goal of the conversation for you? Which topics should be focused?

Self-Reflection & Motivation (strengths, successes)

Use the following questions as food for thought for your conversation:

- What are the experiences and successes I am proud of?
- What has shaped my professional development so far? What have been my "shining moments"?
- In which moments did/do I feel most valuable?
- What am I looking forward to in the near future?
- What energizes me?

Feedback (from others)

Include the perspective of others in your self-reflection:

- What feedback have I collected? Which one was particularly helpful and why?
- What have I learned from the feedback of others?
- What were recommendations for my further development from others?
- Which strengths do you see in me?

Future Requirements & Sweet Spot

Find out more about where you see yourself in the future. Remember that the goals can be "big or small". Consider different growth options like lateral, horizontal, vertical movements as well as growing in place. The broader you think, the more opportunities you see.

Ask yourself the following questions:

- What are my interests for the future and why?
- What goals do I want to achieve?
- Which roles do I want to take over? Where do I want to contribute more?
- What are requirements and needs for our future business success?
- Which skills will be essential for my job in the future?
- What else should I be doing / what should I do less of?
- Where do my interests and strengths overlap with the company's requirements now and in the future?
- How can I align my interests with company goals?
- How mobile am I?

What can you do:

- Go out and talk to colleagues who carry out similar/same tasks.
- Are there any role models you can talk to?
- Expand your network also to find out more about the organizational environment
- Get support from a Mentor or from a People Coach

Agreements & Next Steps

Use the following questions and tips to commit more to your goals:

- What could be a very first step? What do I need to do to come one step closer to my goals?
- When do I want to have reached my goal?
- Who can support me? Who do I need to talk to?
- What do I need to learn?

What's next?

Use your development plan

- ... to get to know your aspirations and what motivates you in your work
- ... to know where you stand and that you are able to communicate if you need individual support
- ... as preparation for dialogs
- ... to work out and show your contribution
- ... to talk to people who could support you in your development (e.g. mentor, leader, coach, HR)
- ... to keep on working on your own
- ... update your profile in HR Global, so your skills and experiences are visible, and you can be identified
